Topic: Arbitration Matters

Volume 1: Dictation No. 5

Note: Outlines of all highlighted words/phrases are given at the end of the passage. Adopt all better outlines than yours.

Before proceeding to adjudicate the application for condonation of delay in filing the present appeal, it is pertinent to notice the growing trend of impleading the Civil Courts and/or Tribunals as respondents in appeals or writs, wherein the orders passed by such Civil Courts or Tribunals are impugned. Although this issue appears to have been settled more than 25 years ago by the Hon'ble Apex Court, the recent spurt in arraying Civil Courts or Tribunals, as the case may be, through their Presiding Officers, casts upon this Court the bounden duty to reiterate the settled legal position. It must be clearly understood that Courts and Tribunals in this country, when acting in judicial capacity, enjoy a degree of immunity from being prosecuted or sued as Courts in their individual or personal capacity, except in cases where allegations of mala fides, partiality, bias or other misconduct are levelled against the particular Presiding Officer, which allegations must satisfy a very high threshold before they can be entertained. These Civil Courts or Tribunals cannot be made parties in proceedings where they have already adjudicated upon the matter, as their decisions are subject to correction by appellate or revisional Courts in judicial proceedings. This position finds authoritative support in the judgment of the Hon'ble Apex Court rendered in Savitri Devi v. District Judge, Gorakhpur and others, AIR 1999 SC 976, which continues to hold the field.

Before parting with this case, it is necessary to advert to one aspect of the matter which is rather disturbing. In the writ petition filed before the High Court as well as in the Special Leave Petition filed before this Court, the District Judge, Gorakhpur and the 4th Additional Civil Judge (Junior Division), Gorakhpur were impleaded as respondents and, in the Special Leave Petition, they were even described as contesting respondents. There was no necessity for impleading the judicial officers who had disposed of the matter in civil proceedings when the writ petition was filed before the High Court, nor was there any justification for arraying them as parties in the Special Leave Petition and describing them as contesting respondents. This Court strongly disapproves of the course adopted by the petitioner, as such a practice causes unnecessary disturbance to the functioning of the concerned judicial officers. Judicial officers cannot be equated with government officials for the purpose of being impleaded as parties to litigation. It is high time that the practice of impleading judicial officers, who dispose of civil proceedings, as parties to writ petitions under Article 226 of the Constitution of India or to Special Leave Petitions under Article 136 of the Constitution of India, is completely stopped. Such a practice is deprecated in the strongest terms.

It must therefore be understood that neither a Court nor a Tribunal, nor the Presiding Officer thereof, is required to defend its order before a superior Court. If the High Court, while exercising its appellate or revisional jurisdiction, calls for the records, such records can always be summoned without impleading the concerned Court or its Presiding Officer as a party. Courts and Tribunals merely adjudicate disputes between parties; they have no personal stake in the outcome and no concern with the issues raised or adjudicated, once their judgment has been pronounced. Hence, they are not required to defend their orders in any manner. Since there is no requirement of their defending the orders, no useful purpose is served in impleading them before appellate or revisional forums. On the contrary, such impleadment, far from serving any legitimate purpose, leads to

Similarly, with respect to impleading an Arbitrator as a party in a petition under Section 34 or 37 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 before a Commercial Court, this Court, drawing an analogy from proceedings before Civil Courts, holds that an Arbitrator ought not to be impleaded as a party-respondent in such proceedings. The Act itself provides detailed grounds for challenging an award under Section 34 and a right of appeal under Section 37. In both instances, it is the award which is the subject matter of adjudication before the Court. Consequently, there is no necessity to implead the Arbitrator as a respondent, since the Arbitrator is neither required to defend the award nor personally interested in the dispute. This Court is not unmindful of the fact that Arbitrators are often embarrassed upon receipt of notices from this Court, which imposes on them an unnecessary burden, and in most cases, they remain unrepresented. Thus, they cannot be treated as contesting respondents. Just as in an appeal or revision the lower Court or the presiding Judge is not impleaded as a party, similarly, in proceedings under Sections 34 or 37, the Arbitrator or members of the Arbitral Tribunal are wholly unnecessary parties, unless specific personal allegations are made against them. Only in rare cases, where such allegations are levelled, may the Arbitrator be impleaded to answer them. The Act itself contains provisions where an Arbitrator may be made a party-respondent. However, once the award has been delivered and the Arbitrator has become functus officio, there is ordinarily no requirement to implead the Arbitrator or the Arbitral Tribunal in proceedings under Sections 34 or 37. In the present case, this Court finds no personal allegations against the learned Sole Arbitrator. Accordingly, the office is directed to delete the name of Shri P.N. Gupta, Sole Arbitrator, as respondent No. 2 from the array of parties in the present appeal.

Turning to the issue of delay, it is well settled that the expression 'sufficient cause' under Section 5 of the Limitation Act cannot be stretched to cover inordinate delays. Merely establishing sufficient cause does not confer an automatic right to have delay condoned. The Supreme Court in Borse Brothers v. State of Bihar has held that only short delays may be condoned by way of exception, not by rule, and that too only where the party has acted bona fide and without negligence.

Accuracy Builder: Analysis from the passage dictated today.

COMMA USAGE

1. Series/List Commas:

"mala fides, partiality, bias or other misconduct"

- Reason: Separates items in a series of allegations
- Rule: Commas separate elements in a list (note: "or" replaces the final comma)

"embarrassment, dejection, and creates unwarranted hurdles"

- Reason: Separates parallel consequences in a series
- Rule: Oxford comma before "and" in final item

2. Appositive/Non-restrictive Commas:

"Civil Courts and/or Tribunals, as the case may be, through their Presiding Officers"

- Reason: Sets off the phrase "as the case may be" as non-essential explanatory information
- Rule: Parenthetical expressions are enclosed in commas

"the Hon'ble Apex Court rendered in Savitri Devi v. District Judge, Gorakhpur and others, AIR 1999 SC 976"

- Reason: Sets off the case citation as additional identifying information
- Rule: Appositives providing extra details are comma-separated

3. Conditional/Introductory Clause Commas:

"Before proceeding to adjudicate the application for condonation of delay in filing the present appeal, it is pertinent to notice"

- Reason: Separates lengthy introductory prepositional phrase from main clause
- Rule: Introductory elements longer than 4 words usually take commas

"Although this issue appears to have been settled more than 25 years ago by the Hon'ble Apex Court, the recent spurt"

- Reason: Separates introductory dependent clause from independent clause
- Rule: Subordinate clauses beginning sentences require commas

4. Participial/Descriptive Phrase Commas:

"Courts and Tribunals in this country, when acting in judicial capacity, enjoy a degree of immunity"

- Reason: Sets off interrupting temporal clause
- Rule: Interrupting phrases are enclosed in commas

OTHER PUNCTUATION

1. SEMICOLONS (;):

"prosecuted or sued as Courts in their individual or personal capacity; except in cases where allegations"

- Reason: Connects two related independent clauses without conjunction
- Rule: Semicolons join closely related complete thoughts

"disputes between parties; they have no personal stake in the outcome"

- Reason: Links two independent clauses explaining the same concept
- Rule: Alternative to period when thoughts are closely connected

2. PARENTHESES ():

"4th Additional Civil Judge (Junior Division), Gorakhpur"

- Reason: Encloses clarifying information about the judge's specific designation
- Rule: Parentheses contain supplementary details

4. FORWARD SLASH (/):

"Civil Courts and/or Tribunals"

- Reason: Shows inclusive alternative (both options possible)
- Rule: Legal writing uses "and/or" to indicate all possibilities
